150th Anniversary Gala Celebration
Sorbara Residence Opening
St. Mike's Alumna in Africa

From the Editor

Welcome to another special sesquicentennial issue of DoubleBlue.

The celebrations continue. I look out my window to see a crisp, sunny winter's day. The banners lining the streets of our campus sparkle with the message "Celebrating our heritage, building our future."

The last few months have seen occasions that not only mark our rich heritage but also promise a strong future. There has been a wide-ranging series of events, from the inaugural Furlong Memorial Lecture to the Celtic Studies Conference on Cape Breton Island and its Gaelic musical and oral traditions.

On 21 October, the St. Michael's community participated in the official opening and blessing of the Sorbara Hall Residence. The first new building on the campus since 1969, its style and grace blend in beautifully with the surrounding landscape on the north west corner of Bay and St. Joseph's Streets. The symmetry in architecture with St. Basil's Church and Odette Hall (Clover Hill) is remarkable.

At our twentieth Alumni Twilight Lenten Retreat, held on 21 Feb. under the direction of Fr. Robert Madden, CSB, over 110 alumni and friends joined in table fellowship and prayer to experience once again the gifts of goodness, discipline and knowledge. St.

Michael's continues to display great vitality and spirit as it serves its educational mission. Our alumni continue to make outstanding contributions at home and abroad. Read about Bonita Latchman—how proud we are!

I want to comment on an error made in the last issue. You will recall the wonderful historical photographs on the center pages. We neglected to acknowledge the research and efforts of Evelyn Collins, our St. Michael's Archivist, in helping us put those pages and photos together. I want to thank her for her continuing support and the invaluable assistance she provides from her office and Archives in the John M. Kelly Library.

My thanks to all, from the Editorial Committee to the contributors, who helped bring this issue to print. My indebtedness to the production team, especially Eva Wong and Fr. Robert Madden, is great.

In this issue, read about the upcoming celebrations that will recognize and honour this beloved institution. I hope that you will be able to join us on these occasions. If you are unable to do so, join us in spirit.

SMC President's Report

As I write this, snow has finally settled on the St. Michael's campus. The great cycle of the seasons has provided us with yet another Toronto winter, moderate but grey, and as I look out my office window I see undergraduates hurrying along St. Joseph Street bundled up for the cold walk across Queen's Park to classes on St. George Street. Some things don't change with the passage of the years ... or at least very little.

This past February, however, was considerably brightened by the appearance of brilliant double blue lamppost banners on all the streets surrounding and running through the College. Supplied through the generosity of an anonymous donor, they both remind us and proclaim to the passing world that this year St. Michael's celebrates its sesquicentennial.

Anniversaries are generally recognized as a time to sit back and take stock. I thought of this recently while thumbing through records deposited in the Basilian Fathers' archives. Just over 150 years ago, Patrick Molony, the first Basilian priest in North America, arrived in Toronto with Bishop Charbonnel and his party, after first landing in New York and travelling up the Hudson River to Montreal. The following is taken from a letter he wrote back to France in November 1850 and describes his arrival in Toronto, Canada West:

Finally, we were en route for Toronto, with still two more days of navigation. We went up the magnificent St. Lawrence, as far as Kingston, which is a Bishopric. From there, we continued our voyage over Lake Ontario for one beautiful night in the clear moonlight, and at seven o'clock in the morning of the twenty-first of September, I caught sight of Toronto. Monseigneur gathered us around him on the bridge of the ship and there we recited, in choir, the Litanies of the Saints and the Salve Regina. It was known in the city that we were to arrive and consequently our fine people made much ado. They did not give us time to disembark, but a crowd gathered around us pressing close to see, and throwing themselves down before the Bishop. The quays and all the streets were blocked with people. We were conducted in procession to the Cathedral. The Bishop of Montreal and several priests from that city went along with us. We were received like true apostles.

You think no doubt, that I have nothing to do here. Just imagine a city of thirty-five thousand souls, of whom seven thousand are Catholics. Here everything is still to be done.

Certainly Father Malony did not waste time. Within a month he was teaching 10 students in a program that preceded by two years the founding of St. Michael's. The quotation from Father Malony tells us important things about Toronto of the day and about the particular mission of the community of Basilian priests who would make Toronto their home. The great need of the 7,000 Catholics of Toronto in 1850 was education, education in the first instance for vocations, and education for young men who could later enter the professions, gaining acceptance in what for many of them was a new country and preparing them to give leadership to their own people.

Since 1852, St. Michael's has seen the education of some 50,000 men and women – among whose number are the leaders of a nation – the Paul Martins, Bob Birgeneaus, Emöke Szathmarys and Tony Compers; but also, and even more importantly are the fathers, brothers, mothers, sisters who have taken the Basilian motto, "Teach me goodness, discipline and knowledge" and have made it a guide for living their lives and raising their families. It is what Patrick Molony, standing with his Bishop on the deck of that steamship in Toronto a century and a half ago, might in some way have hoped for, but could never have foreseen.

We all know there are some things that are too often assumed and thus left unsaid. In celebrating our anniversary, today's St. Michael's community, including our 4,000 students and 22,000 living alumni/ae, acknowledges with enormous gratitude and affection the leadership and continuing contribution to our joint enterprise of the Basilian Fathers, and of the Sisters of St. Joseph and the Loretto Sisters. You and I stand on their shoulders as we build St. Michael's for our children and grandchildren and for our next 150 years.

Letter from Alumni Board President

Seven years ago I became involved with the SMC Alumni Association as a participant and sponsor of the 1995 Spring Memories Celebration event. Later in the year, at the behest of Father Madden (a very persuasive individual), I joined the Alumni Association Board of Directors. After three years of involvement in various committees, I took over responsibility for the Finance Committee with the main directive being development of the SMC Annual Fund. In May of 2000, I became President of the Association and my two-year term in that position ends at the end of April 2002.

It has been a terrific pleasure over the years to work with some great SMC Alumni Association staff members: Father Madden, Director Emeritus; Brian O'Malley, Executive Director, Alumni Affairs and Development; Mary Ellen Burns, Director, Alumni Affairs; Ken Schnell, Development Officer; and, of course, the incomparable Eva Wong, who actually runs the place. It has also been a pleasure to work with my fellow Board members, particularly the committee heads, who give a great deal of themselves in support of the Association and the College in general.

As you read through this issue of DoubleBlue, you will hear about St. Michael's Sesquicentennial Anniversary and the many events planned to celebrate it. The Alumni Association has taken responsibility for the organization of the 150th Gala Celebration to be held on Saturday, 28 September at the Metro Toronto Convention Centre. The main purpose of the Gala, referred to among the planning committee as the "Basilian" ball, is to provide a venue for all the constituents of St. Michael's College – staff, students, alumni and friends – to come together and celebrate our success.

However, there is another purpose for the Gala evening. There are a great many costs involved in staging the many activities planned to celebrate this anniversary year. The Alumni Board is endeavoring to achieve a level of profit from the Gala to offset some of these costs so as not to impact negatively on the SMC operating budget. All the Alumni Board members are devoting their energies to produce an outstanding evening for all concerned. However, we need help from all our Alumni to achieve a high level of success.

As my Swan Song on the SMC Alumni Board, I am heading up the Ticket Sales Committee for the Gala. Elsewhere in this issue you will find an order form for tickets for the event. Now is the time to order your tickets and show your support for St. Mikes. In addition, we are looking for Auction items to help us raise as much money as possible and make the evening varied and enjoyable for all the attendees. Support in these endeavors from all SMC Alumni and friends will be most welcome and appreciated.

This is the last "Letter from the President" that you will be receiving under my byline. Next fall it will be my successor's turn. I can't think of a better way to end my "official" involvement with the Alumni Association than to meet and greet as many fellow alumni as possible at the 150th Anniversary Gala.

I look forward to seeing you there!

Bonita Latchman '91

In 1994, Bonita Latchman '91 made a decision that changed the course of her life. She quit her profitable yet unfulfilling corporate job, disposed of most of her belongings, and moved to Belize, Central America to do missionary work. In her words, "I wanted more out of my life. I had heard about this mission and I decided to take a big risk. I have never looked back." She found herself working with 25 other international volunteer first-year teachers at a small missionary school, and recalls, "It was a real eye-opening experience. Those who worked at the school were so dedicated. I was in awe of them and also of the students, many of whom had to walk miles to get to school. Even though there were little or no employment prospects for them and no university to go to, they were just very happy to go to school and learn."

The living arrangements in Belize were basic: no hot water nor stoves for cooking; the volunteers washed their clothes on rocks by the river; they had to contend with rats and tarantulas. However, Bonita points out that the rewards were great, "We could also go mark our papers at the top of a Mayan ruin and then watch the sun set over the rain forest." She and her colleagues were very moved by the people's strong sense of generosity and community. Despite their unbelievable poverty, they still gave of themselves and shared their few possessions without expectation of return. "The teachers learned more from the students and the community really."

This year-long experience in Belize inspired Latchman to become a professional teacher; she returned to Canada and earned her teacher's certificate. She then journeyed to Columbia, where she taught in a school for wealthier students, a quite different experience, she notes, from Belize. "Those two schools were at the opposite ends of the spectrum. The Columbian students had more money and more opportunities waiting for them once they finished school." She shared with them her experience of Belize, hoping to deepen their gratitude for their good fortune and to arouse in them a greater sense of responsibility for those less fortunate than they. Bonita now teaches at the new Marshall McLuhan Catholic

Secondary School in Toronto, continuing her missionary interests by inspiring her students to be actively concerned for the poor. Last year, she, with four other teachers and two nurses, accompanied nineteen high school students to Malawi and Zambia. Although the students had prepared for a year for this journey, nothing had, or could have, fully prepared them for what they saw in Africa. As Bonita says, "Books and lessons can only teach you so much." The students learned the meaning of poverty first hand as they visited orphanages, missions and hospitals, helping to feed and reading to children. "These students, who had heard me talk about Belize and had been amazed that I had given up a year of my life, were now hooked after just six weeks in Africa."

Latchman was happy to see young students learn early what she learned only later on: gratitude for what you have, openness to other people and to new experiences, and willingness to give with your heart. "I was so pleased to see that such young people saw what is possible in the world," she says. And the students came away with genuine interest and concern for poverty issues in Canada.

Although Bonita Latchman gave up a profitable business career, she has no regrets and could not be happier with the decision she made back in 1994. "I have applied what I learned in those countries, and my life is all the richer for it. I am confident that the students we took to Africa feel the same." She tries to teach her current students the basic lessons she learned – to be grateful for what you have and to try to make a difference, however small, in the world. Of her present calling she says, "It is not always a perfect career, but it is often inspiring – I'm very happy being a teacher."

Inaugural Furlong Memorial Lecture

Cardinal Edward Idris Cassidy began his address on the theme "Catholics and Jews Today: What Has Changed" by recalling two moments in the celebration of the Christian Jubilee Year 2000. On 12 March, he told us, "Pope John Paul II called for and presided over a special service in St. Peter's Basilica during which, in the name of the Catholic Church throughout the world, the following prayer was offered:

*God of our Fathers, you chose Abraham and his descendants
To bring your name to the nations:
We are deeply saddened by the behaviour of those who in the course of history
Have caused these children of yours to suffer,
And asking your forgiveness
We wish to commit ourselves to genuine brotherhood
With the people of the covenant."*

The Cardinal reminded us that two weeks later Pope John Paul II placed this prayer, with his signature on it, in the Western Wall of the Temple in Jerusalem. His Eminence also recounted how, three days earlier, the Pope had placed a wreath in the mausoleum of Yad Vashem, lit the flame that recalls the six million victims of the Shoah, and in moving words expressed deep sadness at the sufferings of the Holocaust's victims, and the fervent hope and determination that such a horror would never happen again.

Cardinal Cassidy underlined that "these events symbolize the new relationship that has been forged over the past 36 years...between Catholics and Jews." The address continued with reference to the "complete reversal of History" and the description of the building of a new relationship between the two partners. Answering the question "what now?", the Cardinal cautioned against the dangers of standing still, and expressed a hope that, by consolidating and building mutual trust, by continued dialogue, and by ongoing education, Catholics and Jews might move towards a closer partnership.

Cardinal Cassidy concluded his remarks by noting the need "to go further and move our gaze from the bilateral relations of Jews and Christians to a wider world." In that very spirit, we are pleased to announce that the Second Annual Furlong Memorial Lecture will have as its theme, "Understanding Islam," and is open to the public. The lecturer will be John L. Esposito, the Founding Director of the Institute for Muslim Christian Understanding at Georgetown University. Planned for Sunday 6 October 2002, the Lecture will once again be followed by a daylong colloquium on Monday 7 October with Christian and Muslim scholars engaging invited participants in dialogue. If you would like to be invited to the colloquium, please contact the St. Michael's Continuing Education office at 416-926-7254 or by e-mail to mj.marrocco@utoronto.ca

[The complete text of Cardinal Cassidy's Lecture may be downloaded from the St. Michael's website (www.utoronto.ca/stmikes) under the "colloquium archives" heading. In addition to the Furlong Lecture transcript, the website displays photos from the 21-22 Oct. 2001 conference on Jewish-Catholic relations. All agreed that the 22 October colloquium on Jewish Catholic relations, that attracted one hundred fifty participants and brought scholars from both Faiths together, had resulted in excellent discussion of the themes of the Hebrew Scriptures, the Holocaust, and the Land of Israel.

The Editor Interviews:

Margaret O'Gara

Professor Margaret O'Gara is a respected, admired, and appreciated teacher in the St. Michael's Faculty of Theology. Excellently prepared, organized in presentation, challenging, fair, dedicated wholeheartedly to her students and to her discipline of foundational theology and ecumenical dialogue, she conducts her classes and seminars with the calm, focused demeanor of the accomplished professional academic that she is. However, one experiences something different in her demeanor as she reflects on her recent experience in Rome; the same academic professionalism and expertise are there, but marked by a more overt animated excitement. As one of the two theological advisors chosen, O'Gara joined the Canadian delegation of four bishops selected by the Canadian Conference of Catholic Bishops to represent the Canadian Church at the World Synod of Bishops held 30 September to 27 October 2001 in Rome.

I recently interviewed Professor O'Gara. She talked without hesitation about the excitement that came from the synodal discussions and about the dramatic experiences of communion that the Synod afforded. The Canadian delegation "labored as a team in its analysis of the emerging themes, and in its discussion and review of the bishops' speeches, and of the propositions and amendments proposed or to be proposed for voting." This process produced for the Synod a view of the Catholic experience in Canada based upon the fruitful integration of theological research and pastoral insights.

Reflecting on her synodal report, "United in the Faith," that appeared in The Catholic Register, O'Gara noted that "the topic most often discussed at the Synod was collegiality, the responsibility for unity and communion in the Faith shared by all of the bishops together, including the Pope." From her long experience of, and official involvement in, ecumenical dialogue, she stressed to me the importance of collegiality at both the synodal and episcopal conference levels. She said that meeting the challenges facing the new evangelization called for by Pope John Paul II in the 21st Century will be significantly aided by the further development of this collegiality.

She commented that a highlight of this Synod was the deepening experience of worldwide Church communion. In this setting, for example, bishops learned from each other about the realities of poverty and marginalization. Synodal participants from Asia and the Middle East articulated strongly that the Christian experience is very different when lived in a minority position, supported neither by the surrounding culture nor religious freedom. O'Gara pointed out how this situation raises the question of "inculturation:" the challenge of proclaiming the Gospel appropriately in different cultures. "To hear the Gospel, you don't have to leave the good things in your culture," she said. Of the widespread desire she witnessed at the Synod for finding new, culturally appropriate ways to proclaim the Gospel she stated, "I was very excited. It was an exciting experience. I felt very hopeful."

The Synod opened just a few weeks after 11 September, and the assembled bishops, while condemning the terrorism, stated, "we could not close our ears ... to the echo of the tragedies of so many other communities," and called on all "to reflect on the structures of sin that leave 80 percent of the world's population with only 20 percent of its income."

O'Gara expects the final Synodal document, now in the hands of the Pope and a committee of bishops who attended the Synod, to be published in about a year. "I hope it will be a good document that captures the full range of topics and views."

As our interview closed, it was very apparent that the work done by our Theology professors in the classroom, in private studies or offices, and in research libraries can, and in this instance did, serve the life of the Church. Margaret O'Gara has represented the Faculty of Theology and the University of St. Michael's College well in this regard. As part of the team representing the Canadian Conference of Catholic Bishops, she has, as stated above, through integrated theological research and pastoral insights, helped to provide the Synod with a view of the Canadian Catholic experience that can benefit the whole Church.

St. Mikes Ambassador Extraordinaire, Rev. Robert Madden CSB Receives Honorary Degree

On December 1, 2001 in St. Basil's Church, Dr. Joseph M. Boyle, Principal of St. Michael's College presented the Convocation candidates to His Eminence Aloysius Cardinal Ambrozic, Archbishop of Toronto and the Chancellor of the University of St. Michael's College. The Principal advised the Chancellor that the graduands had fulfilled successfully the academic requirements for the various degrees, diplomas and certificates and recommended they be awarded. The Chancellor responded positively.

Three SMC Alumni were the recipients of Honorary Degrees. Sister Susan Mosteller, CSJ '68 of L'Arche Daybreak, Richmond Hill, Ont. was granted the degree of Doctor of Sacred Letters honoris causa. Dr Ronald Martin Schoeffel '57 received the degree of Doctor of Sacred Letters honoris causa. He also delivered the Convocation Address reflecting on the tragedy of 11 September, 2001. He was hopeful that after such horrific events, a new age would be ushered in that exhibited greater compassion and peace.

Rev. Robert Madden CSB '52, Professor Emeritus and Executive Director Emeritus of Alumni Affairs and Development, better known as "an unequalled ambassador of St. Michael's College" was honoured with the degree of Doctor of Divinity honoris causa. Rev. Dr. T. Allan Smith CSB noted in his citation, " In the case of Fr. Madden the features of Christ the prophet, priest and king have gradually impressed themselves on his person and shaped his manner of service to the academic and ecclesial worlds in which he has spent his life."

Daniel Alan Smith, one of 13 recipients of the Doctor of Philosophy in Theology was awarded the Governor General's Gold Medal. His dissertation was entitled "The Post-Mortem Vindication of Jesus in the Sayings Gospel Q."

Dr. Mimi Marrocco, Director of the Continuing Education Division presented candidates for the following specialized certificates:

Certificate in Catholic Leadership

Certificate in Youth Ministry Studies

Certificate in the Catechesis of the Good Shepherd

In conformity with the provisions of the Memorandum of Agreement between the Toronto School of Theology, the Federated Universities and Colleges as its member institutions, and the University of Toronto, and by the authority vested in him by the Senate of St. Michael's and by the Governing Council of the UofT, the Chancellor of the University of St. Michael's College, joined by UofT Chancellor The Hon. Henry Jackman, conferred conjoint USMC/UofT degrees on the Master of Theology, Master of Theology in Jewish Studies and the Master of Divinity candidates.

Following the academic procession, a reception was held in Brennan Hall.

Continuing Education at St. Mikes – Taking Leadership Seriously

As a leader in Catholic Education for 150 years, St. Michael's takes seriously its contribution to the formation of the leaders of tomorrow. College alumni have for many years personified the success of the undergraduate education which they received while enrolled in degree programs. More recently, our alumni circle has grown to include graduates of Certificate programs offered through the Continuing Education Division. We think it is worth noting that among Ontario's thirty-four English Catholic school boards, 12 Directors of Education have experienced either degree credit or certificate based professional learning at St. Michael's. Along with ever increasing numbers of supervisory officers, principals and school chaplains, these alumni have become ambassadors for Catholic leadership throughout the province.

A partnership between St. Michael's and the Catholic Principals Council of Ontario has led to the development of "The Catholic Leadership Formation Program." Designed to prepare novice and aspiring principals and vice principals to realize their potential as Catholic leaders, the Formation Program is just one of a series of courses that will be registered with the College of Teachers to allow participants to meet the professional learning requirements mandated by the Ministry of Education.

November 2001 saw the introduction of "Leadership and Vision: The Dilemmas of Leadership," a four day residential experience in Niagara-on-the-Lake co-sponsored by St. Michael's and the Niagara Institute. The sharing of values by the two institutions has resulted in a program that is a unique blend of action and discussion. By examining stories, essays and letters, taking part in group activities, watching a film and attending a Shaw Festival play, participants encounter and debate the "eternal dilemmas" faced by leaders throughout history and literature.

For those who lead and those who like to follow, Continuing Education offers journeys for the mind and the spirit. This year's "Classical Pursuits" journey to Italy to discuss Umberto Eco's Name of the Rose includes a week of seminar learning followed by a week long tour of medieval monasteries and art treasures. The dates are May 3-18 and at the time of printing, 8 places were still available for this course.

St Michael's College and the Newman Centre

For nearly 90 of its first 150 years of service to Catholic education, St Michael's College has been a close partner in the Newman Centre of the University of Toronto. In fact, before the founding of the original "Newman Hall," there were two predecessor clubs based at the College. The men's Catholic Students Society of Toronto had been founded by Rev. Laurence Brennan, CSB, Pastor of St Basil's Church, in 1901, while the women's equivalent, variously known as The Catholic Women's Club of Toronto University, of University College, and of the University of Toronto, first met at St Joseph's Convent in 1908. The physical relationship between the Newman Centre and the College was at its closest in the first decade after Archbishop McNeil founded it as Newman Hall in 1913. Its mission was to provide for the religious and social needs of Catholic students at the University, but in particular those not already enrolled at St Michael's, Loretto or St Joseph's Colleges. The previously existing Catholic men's and women's student societies were absorbed into Newman Hall, which from the outset welcomed both men and women students; it soon became one of the most popular meeting places for Catholic students on the University campus. The Archbishop purchased a three story brick residence at 97 Joseph Street, which became Newman Hall. He then erected in its large garden a chapel seating about 250. Dedicated to St Thomas Aquinas, it was opened on Palm Sunday 5 April 1914.

Newman Hall's stay on St Joseph Street would be brief. Within a decade of its founding, the decision was made that, if the Hall was to minister effectively to the broader Catholic student body, a more central location on the University campus was needed. As a result, what came to be called the Newman Club, and eventually (and currently) the Newman Centre, moved to its present location at 89 St George Street in 1922. Despite the physical separation, relations between St Michael's and the Newman Centre remained close over the decades, especially in the period 1957-2000, administration of the Centre was intrusted to the Basilian Fathers.

Many St Michael's alumni have fond memories of their time spent at Newman. More than a few met their future spouses there, and several were married in its beautiful gothic chapel.

On Tuesday 23 October, members of the St. Michael's Community were joined by representatives of the University of Toronto for the blessing that marked the official opening of the new Sorbara Hall Student Residence. His Eminence Cardinal Aloysius Ambrozic, Chancellor of the University of St. Michael's College, presided at the blessing ceremony in the slype of the new building in the presence of the Honourable Henry Jackman, Chancellor of the University of Toronto, Richard Alway, President of the University of St. Michael's College, and assembled guests. The large crowd in attendance then filled Sam Sorbara Auditorium in Brennan Hall for a festive reception. During the reception, a number of the dignitaries present spoke briefly, including Cardinal Ambrozic, Wendy Cecil, Chairman of the Governing Council of the University of Toronto, and Mary Catherine Birgeneau '62, co-chair of the St. Michael's Sesquicentennial Planning Committee, who brought greetings from her husband, Robert Birgeneau '63, President of the UofT. Alessandro DeSimone, President of the St. Michael's College Student Union, and Bruno Wall '82, the generous sponsor of one of the floors of the new residence, also spoke. Joseph Sorbara '63 movingly recalled the Sorbara family's long association with St. Michael's, and the role the College has played in the lives of many of them. President Alway and Cardinal Ambrozic voiced the sentiments of the St. Michael's Community when they expressed gratitude to the Sorbara family for their generous role in the funding and construction of the new residence.

The Celtic Studies Cape Breton Conference

The Sandy McIntyre Band concludes the conference with a high energy Cape Breton traditional music session (Photo: Jim Watson)

Thanks to the generous sponsorship of Murray Goldman and the St. Andrew's Society of Toronto, the indefatigable energy of the Celtic Studies Administrative Assistant Mrs. Jean Talman, and the enthusiastic support of student volunteers, the Celtic Studies conference on "Words and Music of Cape Breton" was a great success. An audience of over 300 heard six presenters talk about the folklore, songs, music and literature of Cape Breton.

Leading cultural figures from Cape Breton gave "demonstration" talks, in which they presented their own work, and located it within a broader historical and social context.

In the morning session, prominent folklorist Seamus Watson told several Cape Breton folk tales, discussed the different genres of storytelling, and commented on the connection between language and folk culture. Lorrie MacKinnon, a Gaelic enthusiast living in Toronto, followed with a fascinating talk on the poetry, themes, and melodic origins of the Gaelic songs she had discovered in the Mabou Ridge region. Lorrie sang excerpts from several of those songs.

After lunch, David Greenberg, the well-known Cape Breton-classical cross-over musician, spoke on the history of Cape Breton fiddle music. As an unexpected bonus, he brought along Donald MacClelland, a legendary figure in Cape Breton's fiddle tradition. Together they played some wonderful strathspeys, jigs and reels. Since Donald is in his eighties, and rarely plays in public these days, it was a truly memorable moment.

Mary Jane Lamond, a self-described "sharer of spirit and sharer of songs," talked about her discovery of and evolving relationship with Gaelic songs, discussed the different kinds of songs in the tradition, and demonstrated in song the various genres.

The conference moved from music to literature as Alistair MacLeod read from his award-winning novel No Great Mischief, and then provided a series of perceptive, thoughtful and humorous responses to questions from the audience. "Words and Music of Cape Breton" concluded with a high-energy traditional music session from the Sandy MacIntyre band, after which Sandy not only presented Alistair with a jig he had written especially for him, but also gave us the world premiere performance of the piece. It was a fitting end to an unforgettable day.

Faculty of Theology

The long prepared for and eagerly awaited accreditation visit from the Association of Theological Schools has been completed. Sister Anne Anderson CSJ, Dean of the Faculty, reports that all of the Faculty's programs were re-accredited. In addition, the Master of Theological Studies degree received its first accreditation.

Professor Margaret O'Gara will join George Vandervelde, Professor of Theology at the Institute for Christian Studies, and Rev. Peter Wyatt, Principal of Emmanuel College to teach a new course next fall at the Toronto School of Theology. This course will address some of the "tough issues" that still divide the churches. It promises to stimulate discussion of different points of view by both students and professors. This marks the first time that a course will be team-taught by professors from the Christian Reformed Church, the United Church of Canada, and the Roman Catholic Church. Each of the professors has been active for a long period in international ecumenical dialogues.

The John F. and Teresa Mulvey Mallon Bursary has been awarded for the first time to two students enrolled in the Professor Mark McGowan has a whole new understanding of Christian outreach. In February, he traveled to the Yukon to lead a workshop for Catholic teachers in Whitehorse. He also led a session with parent advisory groups. Upon his return, he commented on the wonderful people he encountered in a very cold but beautiful location.

Boozer Brown Game

On a sunny Saturday afternoon in October, the Alumni gathered to play the students in the annual football game for fabled Boozier Brown Maple Telephone Box-and-Loving Cup. Lead by Tom Wiley '68 from Ottawa (tallest in the picture), and anxious to make amends for their 2000 loss, the Alumni jumped to a 3-0 lead on James Cooke's strong arm. The students mounted a comeback, but the Wiley Veteran Alumni held on for a 4-3 victory.

Happy Winners (all from the 1991-1993 Mulock Cup champion teams).
